

Juan and Maria

by Bob Bouche, r Nov 2010

I'm in my office when I heard the yell,
production shut down, things not going well.
Juan and Maria, in a terrible fight,
both of them screaming, They both were up tight.

Juan was so tired, his job was so tough.
Lazy Maria she won't do enough!
Juan is a liar. My job is too tough
Juan is so lazy, he won't do enough!

Juan let's get this right, your job is so tough.
Maria's so easy, she won't do enough!
Listen Maria, your job is so tough.
Juan's job is easy, he won't do enough!

This is so easy, no problem at all.
You two trade places, Juan sit in her stall.
You have what you want, the easiest stuff.
Now get back to work, been goofing enough.

Fighting was over, the yelling did cease,
back in my office, a moment of peace.
One hour went by then they started to yell,
production shut down, things not going well.

What is wrong this time? I asked in despair
while many invectives flew through the air.
We want our old jobs! We want them back now!
So take your old jobs. Get back to work now!

Amen
